Carbon has the highest melting/sublimation point of the elements. The melting point of a diamond is  $\sim 3550\text{ }^{\circ}\text{C}$  with the sublimation point of carbon around  $\sim 3800\text{ }^{\circ}\text{C}$ .

Pure carbon takes many shapes— coal, graphite, and diamonds are all carbon structures.

Carbon is the fourth most abundant element in the universe— hydrogen, helium, and oxygen are found in higher amounts, by mass.

Carbon-dating is based on the decay rate of the isotope carbon-14 to carbon-12.
